OCEAN LINERS ALWAYS RACING. At the Top of Their Speed Whether

These prices are for not Discussing the grounding of the American liner St. Paul on Saturday, the agent of a rival Atlantic liner said: "The newspapers that jump up and howl "The newspapers that jump up and how that this accident was due to the fact that the St. Paul was racing with the Campania, and then print long stories about 'the crime' of ocean racing, simply don't know what they are talking about. Why, you know and everybody else who will stop a moment to think will see that the big liners are always racing—that they have to ers are always racing—that they have to race. The moment the boats on our line or any other line reach Sandy Hook going out they put on all steam and go it for all they are worth. They don't go a bit faster because another boat happens to be in sight. They can't go any faster. If they don't do their best on all occasions they wouldn't get the postal contracts, and they would lose the government subsidies. Another reason they get there as quick as they can is that the quicker the trip is made the less money it costs the company. 'But, above all, the public ought to understand and the newspapers ought to tell them so, instead of denouncing the companies, that fast traveling on the ocean is just as safe and a great deal more comfortjust as safe and a great deal more comfortable than slow traveling is. Can you point able than slow traveling is. Can you point to a single instance where an accident to a steamship on the sea was due to the speed at which she was going? There is not one. If you look at the record you will find that there are proportionately fewer accidents to the fast boats of the big lines than there are to the slow boats. It's the same on the water as it is on the land. It is the slow coach train that gets wrecked five times out of six. Fast trains don't run off the track or smash things or break down. If they do happen to break down the tools are there to fix them and the hands are the most skilled that money can obtain. So on the great ships. The officers and the men are a higher grade of men than are emthe great snips. The officers and the men are a higher grade of men than are employed on the slow boats and there is everything on board of a great, swift ship to repair almost any damage that can possibly happen. But I was talking about racing. I want to say that there is positively no more racing when two boats are run.

no more racing when two boats are run-ning side by side than there is when both are a thousand miles apart." BARD COAL PRICES.

Action Taken by the Sales Agents at New York.

The sales agents of the anthracite coal companies met yesterday at New York to February. It was recommended that 2,500,000 tons be mined in that month, and the following schedule of prices was adopted: Grate, $3.10; egg and chestnut, $3.35; and mechanical development and stove, $3.60. These are f. o. b. figures. per ton above the recent actual selling prices, but are from 30 to 60 cents per ton below the nominal circular established last fall. The old western circular of prices was reaffirmed, as follows: At Buffalo, gross tons, grate, $4.15; egg, stove and chestnut, $4.40; Chicago, net tons, grate, $5.25; egg, stove and chestnut, $5.50. The tide water prices established yesterday are net figures.

The sales agents adjourned to February 27. All interests were represented.

> Opposed to Christening With Spirits. The executive committee of the W. C. T. U. at their meeting at Lexington, Ky., yesterday drafted a protest against the use of whisky or any intoxicants in the christening of the new warship Kentucky. The ing of the new warship Kentucky. The toard declined to give out a copy of the protest until it shall have been mailed to Secretary Herbert and Miss Harriett B. Richardson of Lexington, who has been selected by the secretary to christen the ship, and who asked the privilege of using old Bourbon for the purpose.
